About the Reuters-NABJ Fellowship Program

The Reuters-NABJ fellowship, open to rising reporters, recent graduates and business professionals, is part of the Reuters Editorial Trainee Program. Participants will gain a deep grounding in financial and/or general news reporting, work on fast-paced news stories and develop skills in enterprise journalism.

- Nine months of hands on, real-world experience with competitive pay in a Reuters bureau
- Intensive classroom training, followed by reporting team work
- Mentorship by Reuters editors throughout the program

About the Reuters-NABJ Graduate Scholarship

Launched in August 2017, the Reuters-NABJ scholarship is open to graduate students applying to Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism and to the Business & Economic Reporting program at New York University's Arthur L. Carter Journalism Institute.

- Recipients at both schools will each receive $40,000 or more in tuition and other credits
- Writing and reporting workshops alongside Reuters staff in New York, mentorship by Reuters editors throughout the academic year and an invitation to meet with senior reporters and staffers at Reuters Times Square office
- Paid 10-week summer internship with Reuters will be offered to each scholarship recipient upon graduation
