Digital SSL Certificate Services	70.740	SD4H	Service	Digital Certificate SSL Services provide digital certificates, authentication, and resolution services to businesses and individuals wanting to perform secure electronic commerce and Internet communications. To initiate the service, customers complete an on-line registration form through the service provider's website. The service provider relies on this customer-provided information (which includes a customer-provided public key) to authenticate the customer's identity. Once the information is authenticated, the service provider electronically issues a digital certificate, which is then installed by the customer on their web server. The digital certificate is a unique, customized identifier and includes such information as the customer's name and public key, the name of the issuer, digital signature of issuer, and the serial number of the certificate. End user web browsers will authenticate the digital certificate based on analysis of an algorithm derived from the issuer's digital signature. The public key is used by a web browser to encrypt a session key (session key is created by the customer's web browser) which is then transmitted to the customer's web server, and then decrypted by the web server. The session key is used going forward for the encryption and decryption of all data transmitted between web browser and web server. Resolution services provided in this package ensure that the digital certificate is valid and not revoked. No encryption software is provided during the issuance of neither the certificate nor the authentication and resolution services.
